Seeking Safer And Shorter Route To Town

PLACING THE PLAZA WITHIN DOZEN MINUTES OF BEACH DISTRICTS

Chas. Liftchild, chairman of the public improvement committee of the Mission Beach Chamber of Commerce, presented a strong resolution by that body to the city council early this week urging the adoption of plans for a more safe and direct highway from the beach districts to downtown San Diego. It was asked that immediate proceedings be started for the grading and paving of West Point Loma boulevard and Midland drive to the present highway at Marine base.

The resolution also stated that considering the large area affected from La Jolla to Ocean Beach the payment for the improvement should cover the entire territory, making the assessment very light when distributed among so many.

The resolution was referred to City Manager Rhodes for an early report. Endorsement of the project has been made by the Pacific Beach business organization while Ocean Beach long ago went on record in favor of the shorter route to the city, with a proper allotment of the cost among those who would be chiefly benefitted by the improvement.

The beach district would be just a dozen minutes from the plaza.

STRAND SWEET SHOP TO BE OPENED SOON IN NEW THEATRE BUILDING

Clifford Harrison and Alan Belmont, two very energetic and ambitious young men of Ocean Beach, have leased one of the stores adjoining the lobby in the new Strand Theatre building on Newport avenue, where they will open quite soon what will be known as the "Strand Sweet Shop." An attractive modern soda fountain will be installed and an excellent line of the latest confections will be carried. Besides the service of ice cream and all sorts of new-style fountain drinks, particular attention will be paid to the selection of an inviting assortment of fresh candies, suitable to the seasons. The stock will also include cigars, cigarettes, chewing gum, lozenges and the like. Both of the enterprising young proprietors are well known high school boys, who will personally attend to the business of the Strand Sweet Shop from noon till near midnight, and their many friends wish them much saccharine success.

"HELL'S HIGH ROAD"

"AFTER BUSINESS HOURS"

"BEYOND THE BORDER"

These three striking titles give an excellent summary of the splendid attractions currently booked by Manager Ericeson at the Ocean Theatre. They introduce such famous stars as Elaine Hammerstein, Leatrice Joy and Harry Carey in the respective leading roles. The different rates are systematically listed in the regular display advertisement, special attention being called to Cecil De Mille's great production for the mid-week feature. Tomorrow (Sunday) "Are Parents People?" will be vividly answered by Adolph Menjou and Florence Vidor, supported by a very strong cast Good added comedy can always be counted upon. Go early for a good seat.

DIFFERENT DAILY SALADS AT PAT'S BAKERY

Attention is called to the display announcement of extra specials every Saturday at Pat's Bakery, 1877 Bacon street, where a specialty is also made of serving a different salad every day. The store is open Sundays from 8:30 a. m. to 12 noon and the phone number is Point Loma 65-R. Prompt and satisfactory service is assured all patrons.

Better Sanitation For Cliff Section

NEW SEWER SYSTEM REFERRED TO HEALTH BOARD BY CITY COUNCIL

A resolution adopted by the city council yesterday instructed Mayor Bacon to apply to the state board of health for permission to install a sewer system in part of Ocean Beach and Point Loma Heights, according to plans and specifications now on file. Ocean Beach already has one large sewer system, but the new sewer is for a section as yet without sewer service and for the highlands of part of Point Loma. It is stated that the health board will probably grant the permit.

NEW ORDINANCE REGULATING AUTO TRAFFIC AIDS PEDESTRIANS

A new city traffic ordinance will be put into effect next month which will give pedestrians much added protection. Under the new law the pedestrian has the right of way over all vehicles. Jay-walking is prohibited under the new ordinance. Boulevard stops are provided for the main arteries of the city, requiring motorists about to enter traffic from side streets to come to a complete stop. Printed pamphlets of the new law will be generally distributed throughout the city.

SUPERINTENDENT DEERING OUTLINES REQUIREMENTS FOR RECREATION CENTERS

Potentially a saving of more than $2,500,000 has been achieved by the Board of Education and the Board of Playground Commissioners through their agreement for joint action in the development of the play and recreation program, according to Tam Deering, Superintendent of Recreation, who states that everywhere it is now recognized that a school without a playground is only half a school. The country wide standard provides for 8 acres as the minimum space at elementary, 20 acres for Junior High and 40 acres for High Schools.

Superintendent Deering also states that there are 25 neighborhoods in San Diego where there is no municipal playground and no adequate school ground. So inadequate are our playground facilities, as John Nolen pointed out, that we are regarded by the country at large as being at the foot of all the cities of our size in the United States.

"GET ACQUAINTED" DAY FOR PARENTS AT SENIOR HIGH SCHOOL

Monday, Oct. 12, will be parent's "get acquainted" day at the San Diego senior high school. Fathers and mothers are urged to come to the school at 2:45 to meet the teachers, who will devote the afternoon to conferences with parents. The women of the faculty will be in the library, which is located in the Fine Arts building; the men of the faculty will be in study hall 100, main building. Parents are requested to bring a list of the teachers they wish to meet.

"BILLY" AND JOHN AQUAPLANE ALONG BLVD. IN MISSION BEACH

Last Sunday's downpour of rain brought about all sorts of surprises and startling aftermaths, but probably none was more originally amazing and exceptionally thrilling than the aquaplaning feat performed by "Billy" England and John Chamblin of the Mission Beach Garage early this week.

The night and day deluge made a veritable canal of the paved boulevard, with its solid protecting sidewalls, owing to the fact that some of the drains had become clogged.

It was an opportunity not to be missed by the ever-enterprising England and the equally resourceful Chamblin.

Procuring the Mission Beach Garage tow car, they attached a surf board with a long rope, and while "Billy" kept the engine going just within the speed limit driving up and down the boulevard, John bobbed and bounced and skidded and skipped o'er the waters amid the applause of an admiring populace.

It was acknowledged to be the most wonderful aquaplaning exhibition ever seen on any stretch of wetness in the world.

MANAGER "ED' KICKHAM TO PRESENT FINE GIFTS AT M. B. ROLLER RINK

Lady patrons of the Mission Beach Roller Rink will be mightily pleased next week with the pretty presents prepared for them by the generous and considerate manager, "Ed" Kickham, who announces a dozen fine ivory manicure sets to be given away to twelve ladies holding the lucky numbers. This will happen on Wednesday night, Oct. 14, and will be followed on Thursday evening by the latest "sweeping" sensation, entitled the "Broom Ball." Another big gift event is scheduled for next Friday night, Oct. 16, when twelve neat compact sets will be presented to lucky lady patrons Great interest is being manifested in the polo contest every Tuesday night at 9 o'clock.

ROADWAY FLOODED

The subway under the car tracks on the road to Point Loma and the beach district formed a big pond when the city's pump failed to work. City Manager Rhodes had a big force at work there until 4 a. m. when it was finally put in order and automobilists given right of way last Sunday.

Mission Beach News Notes

Special Representative
For "The Beach News"

Press executive for Mission Beach Chamber of Commrce.

Everyone is happy who is living on Mission Beach today. After a much needed rain, a still more wonderful expression of fulfillment has come with our beautiful clear blue skies and sea bright with sunshine again in this most glorious spot on earth of Southern California.

SILVER LININGS

Behind every cloud is a silver lining, and don't forget, folks, to look for that promise. Here is an old saying that should be kept in our hearts at all times:

"Every cloud has a silver lining,
Therefore, turn your clouds about
And always wear them inside-out,
To show the shining."

And now to illustrate that we should always do that very thing—put out the most cheerful and optimistic view of conditions. Those who have doubted will look well to the big future of Mission Beach. Robert Hicks, prominent theatre and amusement man, has taken charge at the Amusement Center of Luna Park, which will soon be developed along with new enterprises.

Mrs. R. S. Penwarden of 719 Jersey Court entertained Tuesday afternoon with a beautifully appointed birthday party for her little daughter, Margaret, who was just five years old. The little guests were: Alice Jones, Betty and Glen Curtis, Joe Harritt of San Diego, Elizabeth Ellen Higgins of La Jolla, Barbara McLeod of San Francisco, Ruth, Roy and Gordon Penwarden and little Miss Margaret, the honor guest.

Grace DeVoe of San Diego is the house guest of Mrs. J. R. Johnson at 825 El Carmel Place for several weeks.

Mrs. Anna Nicholls, dental hygienist from the school health department, visited the Mission Beach school last Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Chester Van Dussan enjoyed a rest at their beach home on San Jose Place for a few days.

SPECIAL NOTICE

M. B. CHAMBER MEETING UNAVOIDABLY POSTPONED

Owing to the fact that the "Shirley Cottage" cannot be secured as a meeting place, the regular session of the Mission Beach Chamber of Commerce has been postponed until further notice. It is hoped that arrangements will soon be perfected for utilizing the new school house as a center for community meetings. Plans are under way for obtaining a piano, chairs and other equipment, and due announcement of the next meeting of the Chamber will be made in these columns.

The new school is gradually getting its equipment in place and order. This week it is expected that the new steel lockers will be put in place. A fine, large wall clock has been placed in each room. New children are registering every day or so and at present there are forty-seven children with twenty-one extra names registered for a kindergarten. When there are twenty-five children listed with Miss Weller, the principal, a kindergarten teacher will be provided.

Mrs. Ella B. Maro, teacher of piano at La Jolla and San Diego, called on Mrs. F. G. Greenfield last Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. V. F. Huffman are now settled in their newly purchased home on Bayside Walk and Ostend Court.

Miss Schillenberger, the school nurse, will visit the new Mission Beach school to inspect the children every Tuesday.

Miss Ruth Penwarden, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Penwarden, presented her room at school with a beautiful large fern this week

Miss Inez Lightner of San Diego and Mrs. Chester Cole of Coronado were recent dinner guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Johnson on El Carmel Place.

Mrs. Mary L. Thornburgh of 5502 Bayer street, Los Angeles, and Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Fisher of Los Angeles, were guests of Mrs. Van Dorstan over the week-end

In the year 1796, the Wesleyan Methodist church of England sent out a number of missionaries to try to convert the natives of Tahiti and Moorea. It seems that they had some difficulty in the former place and settled in Moorea. At first things went hard with the missionaries. But, with patience, honest Christian living and kindly acts, they succeeded in winning most all the natives to the Christian faith. I am told that a day was set when the natives would bring all their idols to a certain place and that they all would be destroyed by fire. This plan was carried out, and on the ground where the idols were destroyed a church was built in which

Bob Hicks Becomes Big Amusement Chief

PROMINENT SHOWMAN ACQUIRES LUNA PARK AT MISSION BEACH

Announcement was made this week by the Mission Beach company of the lease to Bob Hicks of an entire block of ground in the Mission Beach Amusement Center and the completion of the Luna Park project. Work is to be started in the near future, according to Mr. Hicks, who plans to have the project in readiness for a grand public opening about March 1. The name of the new concern is the Mission Beach Amusement corporation, of which Bop Hicks is president and general manager. Plans for the development call for an initial investment of $50,000. It is stated that when completed the Luna Park project will be one of the biggest of its kind at any amusement park in the west. The units will include a fun house, planned as one of the most modern and unique in the country; a carrousel, a scooter, which is an improved form of the dodgem; a shooting gallery, a mechanically operated amusement building, to be known as the "Third Degree," and one other structure which Mr. Hicks plans to be a "surprise" house. The entertainment to be provided will be clean and wholesome and will appeal to all classes.

Chipping In For New Fishing Pier

MORE FUNDS NEEDED FOR PLANKING AND BRACING PRESENT STRUCTURE

Councilman Louis C. Maire announces that a little over $1,000 has thus far been collected toward the fund for making permanent the temporary pier at Mission Beach. The pier was donated to the city by the contractors, who built it for sewer construction work, and, when the finishing touches have been made, it is stated that it will be one of the finest fishing and boating piers in the southland.

Councilman Maire is an enthusiastic fisherman and says that he hopes to collect from public subscription about $2000 more. Some of the money on hand at present is being used in putting in extra piles on the shore. Funds can be sent to "The Beach News" for acknowledgement, or to Councilman Maire, or to Bert Anthony of the Bank of Italy. No amount is too small and none too large. The time to help is NOW!

Battery Charger Connection Hints

Should Be As Nearly Foolproof as Possible, From Working Standpoint.

A battery charger is one piece of apparatus necessary for every radio equipment that uses a storage battery. It should be the one article that is as nearly foolproof and perfect as possible—not foolproof from the viewpoint of preventing anyone from tampering or changing the mechanical parts, but foolproof from a working standpoint.

One never finds out the defects and faults that are attached to any piece of apparatus until after it has been in service for some time, unless the constructional features are pointed out beforehand.

Some magnetic and bulb types of chargers may be ruined or badly damaged if an attempt is made to charge the battery without first disconnecting the wires that run from the receiving set to the battery terminals. The reason for this is that one side of the power line is usually grounded and one of the filament leads of the set is connected directly to ground. If the wrong connection is made, then a short circuit is made through the charger.

Battery Connected to Set.

Other makes of these chargers can be successfully operated with the battery still connected to the set. Even when this is possible a wave of interference is sent out over the aerial that will ruin reception for all of the receivers in the near vicinity, even though the receiver attached to the charger is not in operation. This is possibly due to the fact that the charger forms a miniature transmitting station.

If the charger is left attached to the battery after it is turned off, then the battery is likely to discharge through the charger. The best arrangement is to detach the battery clips from the set when charging and to detach the charger clips from the battery terminals when the battery is fully charged.

Attached Permanently.

The electrolytic type of charger can be attached permanently to the battery without any danger of discharging or interfering with surrounding receivers while the charger is in operation, or without harming the charger itself. With the bakelite type charger it is possible to use the set and charge the battery at the same time, an impossible feat with either the bulb or magnetic vibrator types of chargers, due to noise.

It sometimes happens that the power supply is cut off, due to breakdown in the generating apparatus or to changing over machines. If the current goes off for only an instant, and then comes back on again, it is likely to cause the vibrator to start up out of phase and cause current to flow through the battery in such a way as to discharge the battery. The electrolytic and bulb types will automatically start to charge with the correct polarity when the current comes on again.

Hint to Radio Fans on Winding Coil for Taps

In winding a coil for taps run on the number of turns to the first tap, then place a strip of thin wood one-fourth-inch wide under the wire. Fruit-basket material makes good strips. When the place for the second tap is reached push the strip of wood through to catch the turn of wire, and so on until the coil is complete. A little binding placed on the wire over the wood and allowed to dry aids in removing the insulation for soldering the tap lead to the coil.—Radio Digest.

Makes Electric Light Wires Act as Antenna

Erecting an aerial is not always an easy matter. In crowded apartment houses where there are many aerials in dwellings, where the owner objects, or on buildings where the physical properties of the roof make an aerial installation a hazardous proposition, a good substitute for an outdoor antenna would be welcomed by many fans.

In experimenting with the balkite B current supply set it was found in most cases that a good substitute for an aerial could be obtained by connecting the ground post of the current supply set to the ground post of the receiver. This antenna post of the receiver was connected to the regular ground on the water system.

There is a condenser action between the ground post on the B current supply set and the lighting circuit. This makes the electric light wires act as an antenna system, which, with the regular ground connection, makes an efficient collector of energy for the receiver.

Tuning is practically the same as with a regular outdoor antenna, and the use of this system is within the reach of any fan who uses this type of plate voltage supply.

TEXAS MAN NEAR HORRIBLE DEATH FROM ALLIGATOR

Seized by Reptile While Wading in Pool at Picnic Party.

Houston, Texas.—Dunk Campbell, fifty-two, had an encounter with a 12-foot alligator and as the result Campbell is at St. Joseph's infirmary suffering from a badly mangled right leg and foot and a mangled left foot.

The encounter occurred in a pool near Big Cypress creek, about twenty-five miles north of Houston, Texas, on the Bammel road, Mr. Campbell being attacked by the 'gator when he waded barefooted into the pool to catch some minnows. He waded into the water shoulders deep when he felt something grab his right knee and leg.

He began to fight to release himself and pulled the alligator high enough to see what it was. He attempted to kick it loose with his left foot and the alligator snapped at that, biting it almost through.

Companions to Rescue.

His companions heard his screams and went to his rescue. His head was almost under water, but they seized his arms and succeeded in wrenching him free and taking him to shore, where an ambulance was called and he was brought to a hospital.

An examination of Campbell's wounds at the hospital showed that his right knee, ankle and heel had been badly bitten and that his left foot was almost bitten through.

Mr. Campbell, with A. J. Cook, S. E. Ahlbeck and two small girls, one his daughter, had gone out to Big Cypress creek to fish. Campbell left the party to go over to the pool to catch some minnows for bait and within a few minutes after his departure other members of the party heard his screams. Hurrying over to the pool they saw Campbell disappear from sight and when he came to the surface the second time the two men in the party grabbed Campbell by one of his arms and pulled him out of the water.

Dynamite Kills Reptile.

Campbell said that he never did see the alligator but that he could tell it was a 'gator when his foot came in contact with him.

Later in the afternoon a party went out to the pool where Campbell was bitten to get the alligator. A charge of dynamite dislodged the 'gator, and he was brought out on the bank of the pool dead.

Put Their Locomotive Through Wall of Fire

Bellingham, Wash.—A crew of men were forced to drive a locomotive through a solid wall of fire and over four wooden bridges, one of which was ablaze, to save themselves from death when the Lyman Lumber company plant, 20 miles south of here, was destroyed by a forest fire.

After most of the men had been released the locomotive crew returned in an effort to save the burning bridge, but it had already collapsed.

Three girls employed in the cook house of the company stuck to their jobs, providing food for fire-fighters until all hope of saving the camp had been given up.

Youths in Fatal Fall Down Abandoned Mine

Pleasantville, Iowa.—Three youths were overcome and fell to their deaths in an abandoned coal mine near here.

Donald Hodgson, seventeen, was overcome and fell, too, in a future attempt to rescue the other boys. The bodies were recovered by means of grappling hooks.

Early Handkerchief

Churchmen have been credited with being the first to use handkerchiefs in Europe, and for a time priests alone were permitted to carry them. Even they were subjected to certain restrictions of use, for the handkerchief formed part of the vestments of the cleric's office and as a "facial," by which name it was known, was worn by the priest officiating before the altar.

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

By F. A. WALKER

THE SMILING HEART

YOU'LL know at a glance the man or woman who is on intimate terms of friendship with the smiling heart, though the face may be serene and undemonstrative, yet beaming with an unspeakable gladness.

Lip-smiles have become mechanical, a mere outward show without meaning. Yet so it is; the tale-bearer smiles; the bandit smiles as he pokes you in the ribs with his gun, steals your last dollar and robs you of your sweetheart's picture.

But how different is the heart-smile, rich with unspoken words of love and truth.

The heart that smiles when everything goes wrong is the heart that is abounding in unsalable faith.

It is the heart that is unselfish; that is overflowing with sympathy; that is willing to face obstacles and go to any trouble to lift up the fallen and bind the wounds of the injured.

It is the smiling heart that builds a cheerful fire in the rusty stove of the poor man's hut and puts pleasant food upon his table; it is the smiling heart that finds warm beds for half-frozen children and comforts their despairing mothers; it is the smiling heart that is helping to bring about the redemption of the world and perhaps saving the worldlings from destruction.

If you could penetrate the depths of the smiling heart, you might discover that its loveliness came from the bitter valleys of sorrow.

Through its own experience, its own disappointment, its own tears it grew through the hard sod, sprouted and burst forth a beautiful flower, that the discouraged might see it and take heart again and move on toward the upward path.

The little bent old woman with a basket on her arm filled with food for the hungry is carrying with her outward evidence of nobility, a heart that radiates mercy, smiling like the noonday sun, which she cannot hide beneath her thread-worn cloak.

That is the heart-smile, with its lips that never lie and its eyes that never scorn.

Who at some period of his or her life does not need the comforting companionship of the smiling heart?

The smiling heart is the invisible link that binds this world to the world beyond, neglecting to fill its purse with gold, but filling the breasts of humanity with a love as bright as the stars and a hope eternal.

Among the NOTABLES

EDWARD BURNE-JONES

WHEN Sir Edward Burne-Jones was a growing boy at school he read the "Morte d'Arthur" and "Modern Painters" and these two books made an impressioon on him that lasted all his life.

Everyone is familiar with the paintings, "The Golden Stairs," "The Merciful Knight" and "Love Among the Ruins," all being widely reproduced. He had an unusual manner of painting, very pictorial and romantic, idealistic, as artists would say.

He was born August 28, 1833, near Birmingham, England. From the time he was a baby, mythology and classic tales interested him. At college he adopted Rossetti as his master, though he had not met that famous man. He knew little of draughtsmanship, but his wealth of pictorial detail made up for that. A trip to Italy, in company with Ruskin, did much to develop him.

His first "Love Among the Ruins" was a watercolor, which was utterly destroyed by a cleaner who thought it was an oil. So Burne-Jones worked it out again, this time in the more lasting medium of oil paints.

Of his own work, he said: "I mean, by a picture, a beautiful romantic dream of something that never was and never will be, in a light better than any light ever shown, in a land no one can define or remember, only desire—and the forms divinely beautiful." No other artist carried out ideals more nearly than he.

He lived to be quite an old man, dying in Exeter, in 1898. One of his last paintings was "Arthur in Avalon."

THE SECRET OF HAPPINESS

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

IN SPITE of speeches, songs and swords,
I have seen many men content.
Red flags are waved, and red-hot words
Are hurled against the battlement
Of wealth entrenched, and kings are cursed—
Yet kings there have been from the first,
And wealth there will be, I opine
Long after words of yours or mine.

Yet I have seen some happiness;
And, strange to say, not always on
The throne, nor always in the press
That swept ahead when thrones were gone.
Yes, even those who hate employed,
And what they hated thus destroyed.
And far ahead their banners bore,
Seemed little happier than before.

So hate and envy are not all,
I said, whatever flag's above.
The very man who makes to fall,
Would you be happy, you must love.
Hate is the passion of an hour,
But happiness is like a flow'r,
That love must plant, and love must 'tend,
And share its fragrance with a friend.

Yes, I have seen some men content,
And they but little were concerned
With kings, how others' fortunes went,
What others had or others earned.
The secret of our happiness
Is not a secret hard to guess:
For happiness, I find, succeeds
Not greater wealth, but simpler needs.

Your Last Name

IS IT VANE?

THIS name is said to be the same as Fane, or at least the two names had the same derivation. They are said to have come from the Welsh personal name Fane, meaning slender. A family of the name Fane or Vane were ancestors of the earls of Westmoreland, and this Vane or Fane family is said to have been descended from a Welshman named Howel ap Vane, of Monmouthshire, who lived and died before the time of William the Conqueror.

The most interesting person of the name Vane in this country's history was Sir Henry Vane, governor of Massachusetts, in 1636 and 1637. He was born in Hedlow, Kent, England, in 1612, so that he must have been governor when only about twenty-four. His father was Sir Henry Vane, controller of the household of Charles I of England. Sir Henry, the son, was a well educated man, having studied at Oxford and later having traveled extensively. He was sent to Vienna in 1691 with the English ambassador and later in Geneva he became a Puritan. Returning to England he found himself out of sympathy with the religious beliefs of the court party and accordingly came to the new world to find religious freedom.

He at once became prominent in affairs and then became governor. Soon he attached himself to the faction headed by Mrs. Ann Hutchins and came into clash with the authorities, especially with Governor Winthrop, who succeeded Vane in office. He returned to England in 1640, where he became a member of parliament. The fees of his office amounted to thirty thousand pounds a year. This Vane regarded as excessive so he returned the amount to parliament. He was eventually executed by his political opponents on a charge of treason.

WALKER—An officer of the forest in old England who patrolled the forest on foot, walking, was called a walker. The name sometimes comes from this, sometimes from a word Wealcere, Anglo-Saxon for a fuller.

THE LUSCIOUS MELON

IF ONE has never preserved the hearts of pink watermelon they have something worth the trouble. Cut the centers from slices of watermelon and make balls, using a French potato ball cutter. Cover them with water in which a small piece or a bit of pulverized alum is dissolved and let stand overnight. Drain and in the morning drop into a thick hot sirup and just scald. Can at once. The melon balls keep their shape and color and are delightful for garnishing dishes in the winter when that color is hard to get.

When musk and watermelons are fresh and good cocktails are especially good.

Cantaloupe Cocktail.

Cut the melon into balls with a potato scoop and fill serving glasses; add a few seeded white grapes, a little lemon sirup and garnish with a sprig of mint in the top of each glass.

In serving melon never place ice in the melon to chill it, as it destroys its flavor. And the most delicious melon may be ruined by being served unchilled. To chill a melon let it stand on ice or in a cold place long enough to become chilled before cutting it. If a large melon cut it and place near ice. Tasteless melons may be treated with a salad dressing, using oil and vinegar, with red pepper and a dash of lemon juice.

Another Cocktail.

Cut the melon, a cantaloupe, into balls, six or eight to a glass, add a little diced pineapple, a slice or two of peaches and cover the whole with a thin sirup, using a little strawberry or cherry juice for flavor, and serve garnished with a cherry and one or two halves of white grapes.

A little nutmeg is liked with cantaloupe, and a little red pepper and more salt than usual in the dressing will be found agreeable.

There is one gap. 1869. Of course, in time, we shall gather exact and complete data; but for the sake of affectionate memory, I set down here a word concerning this search for the mere names of public characters of seventy, sixty, fifty years ago. A commentary upon the general tone of southern California! Nothing was worth recording. Noth ing needed to be remembered, especially. One bright day followed another bright day. Flowers came and went. Men came and went. What of it? Que valga la pena? Nada. Let us saddle a horse and over to Don Fulano's for a dance. The very Bureau of Lighthouses in Washington involves itself in this conspiracy of forgetfulness of what took place at the old Lighthouse on Point Loma. I had last summer 1924 from J. S. Conway, acting Commissioner:

Lure of the South Sea Isles

to worship Christ. This church is quite unique. It is round-shaped with a high ceiling, like a dome, and it seems to be in a splendid state of preservation.

Sunday morning found me at the 9 o'clock service. I am informed that they are continuous all day by different Deacons and that the minister in charge resides in Papeete. They were singing when I arrived. While I did not understand the language, I did the tune. The Deacon in charge was dressed in overalls and he was barefooted. Most of the people were dressed plainly and bare-footed. A few girls were very neatly dressed and looked nifty. I had a piece of money ready for the collection and I was quite shocked when that did not take place. Church services without a collection was something I had not been used to seeing.

After the services I went back to the hotel, and asked Dr. Lowie to go with me to the 11 o'clock morning meeting. He gladly joined me. The church was crowded at this service, and the Deacon who preached, was dressed in a frock coat, and wore foot covering While we could not understand the language, we both agreed that he acted sincere and we believed he preached a good sermon. The singing was good, but no music. The people looked and acted sincere and we believed they were. After the service, we tried to get the two deacons outside the church for their pictures but failed. They said they would have to get a permit from Papeete. Dr. Lowie could talk a little French, and understood them to say something about breaking the Sabbath. No collection was taken at this service, and I am told they never do take any. We both came away much impressed with the sincerity of the natives. The name of this little village, where the church is located, is Papetoai.

The next two days were spent in long walks and admiring the scenical beauty of this island. One of the wonders is a vanilla plantation, and I watched them fertilize the flowers.

At one time, this island had many natives that were afflicted with elephantiasis, a form of leprosy. One who gets this terrible disease swells up several times their natural size, and there is no known cure.

A few years ago the French government found out that the natives got this disease by drinking contaminated water that mosquitoes had deposited their eggs in. So the government ordered a large reservoir built up on the high hills back of this village of Papetoai, and had it well protected from mosquitos. Gravity water was piped down to the village, and it runs out of several hydrants scattered thru the main and only street. This water is said to be excellent and 100% pure. And now there is no more disease of the above mentioned kind. Doing away with contaminated water fixed the germs.

And now my visit to beautiful Moorea is coming to an end. In the morning the hotel will be deserted, as Major Edington, Dr. Lowie and myself, (the only guests) will leave for gay Papeete on the power schooner Manaura. This little craft was taking on a number of "fruit fed porkers" when we arrived at the shakey old dock. With some difficulty we three whites managed to crowd ourselves in between the mixed passengers, which consisted of Chinese and natives. We were packed like sardines, Dr. Lowie and myself sitting close together. We were to make two landings, and should be in Papeete in about four hours.

Our first landing was up Cook's Bay (named after the famous explorer) I do not believe the shores of this bay have changed very much since Capt. Cook sailed into this harbor in 1796. The shores were lined with cocoanut trees, and scattered among the trees were thatched native huts. Natives could be seen amongst the trees scantly dressed. I believe the only changes around this bay since Cook's discovery are two Chinese stores. One will find them most everywhere in the tropics, and not so many natives as formerly. Here was a real South Sea atmosphere, with all its environments. It was a scene such as I had pictured in my mind for years. I would have liked to have gone ashore, and stayed there for a visit, if I could only talk their language.

We delivered a little freight and only took on a few bags of charcoal at this landing. We were soon on our way again. Our next landing was at Afareaitu, another primitive looking place, but not as pretty as Cook's Bay. This place did not have much of a harbor, just a landing place on the edge of the ocean. Here our freight that we took aboard, was mostly the famous "fruit fed porkers," live weight. And how they did squeal! They were brought aboard with their legs tied together, and slung over a long pole and upside down They were placed forward of the schooner; the crowded passengers were aft—contemplate the oder!

We sailed out and into a very rough sea and how this little craft did pitch and roll. The Dr. began to look pale around the jaws. He still kept up his famous smile and pleasant manner, but he could not hold out against fate, and the rolling boat. As I have said we were cramped for room. The Dr. leaned out and I don't think he cared much what happened. I had hold of his legs, as it wouldn't take much of a pitch of this rolling craft to send him over. Did you say anything about sharks? The waters are alive with the great big man eaters. I didn't tell the Dr. about one big fellow that I saw. He was at least 12 feet long, but I faithfully kept my hand close to the doctor's legs.

The Major was sitting on the other side of the wheel. Once in a while, I would yell out, "How are they coming, Major," and he would answer, "Don't mention it, Daly." Wish to say, but not in a boastful way, that the writer never gets sea sick. In fact the more the ship pitches and rolls, and the more it blows, the better I feel. It has always been this way with me. Hence, my love for the ocean. I believe all the passengers were sea sick, excepting myself. About five miles out from Papeete I sighted a yacht and it looked like the "Eloise" coming in our direction.

When it was right opposite, I partly arose and with one eye on the doctor's legs I waived my handkerchief. The Commodore saw me, and ordered a salute of two blasts from the whistle.

As we entered the harbor of Papeete, everybody began to feel better, and the doctor's face again took on that pleasant and cheerful look.

POST-MORTEM PRAISES

I've noted when a fellow dies, no matter what's he's been—
A saintly chap or one whose life was darkly steeped in sin—
His friends forget the bitter words they spoke but yesterday,
And now they find a multitude of pretty things to say.
I fancy when I go to rest someone will bring to light
Some kindly word or goodly act long buried out of sight;
But, if it's all the same to you, just give to me instead
The bouquets while I'm living and the knocking when I'm dead.

—Katherine.

END OF RIBBON LEADS TO LINEN GIFTS IN CEDAR CHEST

Last Wednesday afternoon a very pretty linen shower was given in honor of Mrs. Ben Buckholtz, formerly Miss Mamie Weinzul, at the home of Mrs. J. E. Dunbar, 4836 Cape May avenue, assisted by Mrs. F. J. Ratty, sister of the honor guest. Many useful gifts were found at the end of a ribbon in a cedar chest. The house decorations were pink and asters, and the table center contained a wishing well filled with fortunes, tied with pink ribbons, for each guest to pull out. The guests included: Mesdames McCullough, Weischedel, Whitmore, Spotts, Boyd, Holmes, Bert Beeler, Wells, Grandmaitre, Beeler, Bodenbeck, Bowles, King and Hinkle, of San Diego.

ALL WOMEN INVITED TO ATTEND CLUB MEETING NEXT MONDAY NIGHT

All women residents and visitors at Ocean Beach are invited to attend the meeting of the Ocean Beach Woman's club next Monday evening, Oct. 12, at 8 p. m. The meeting will be held in the kindergarten of the school instead of in the usual place.

The special topic of interest for the evening will be the school in its relationship to the community. This subject is of importance to everyone, regardless of whether they have children in school, particularly as regards the wider use of the school plant for community purposes.

The Federated Clubs of the county, at their convention last spring, urged their members to take advantage of the California law establishing community centers at all schools. Aside from these serious considerations, the humor and joyousness of childhood has a universal appeal and the committee has not left fun out of the program. Those who attend are asked to have ready to tell or read an anecdote of child life or some funny saying of a child.

There will be three brief talks on school life. Miss Kate Spani, principal of the local elementary school, will tell what the modern school is doing to make good citizens. Mrs. Anna Muville, president of the Ocean Beach Parent-Teacher association, will tell how, through organization, the community aids the school. Mr. Pete Ross, principal of the new Point Loma high school, will explain its significance in the community.

A musical program will follow the discussion. For this occasion, Mrs. Grace Leonard will be the soloist and the Bungalow Orchestra will play several numbers. Refreshments and a social hour will follow the program.

PROPER FOOD FOR SCHOOL CHILDREN

The age during which children are attending school may aptly be called "The Dangerous Age." It is the period of rapid growth and every care should be taken to insure the child of a normal and healthy body. The idea of eating only fit and wholesome foods should be early impressed on the younger members of every family in order to protect them against later ill health and its accompanying unhappiness. If the utmost care is not taken in the diet that is used by children, cases of food poisoning, indigestion and kindred ailments may result.

And milk, being the chief item in the diets of most children, should be carefully guarded. It is, because of its nature, prone to infection if exposed to germs and may soon become unfit for use. Wherever there is the slightest reason for doubt as to its purity and food value, steps should be taken to insure the sterility and the fitness of milk intended for consumption by children. Many mothers have adopted the excellent practice of using milk that is absolutely pure and sterile and free from any germs or bacteria. The most satisfactory, as well as the safest milk used in preparing food for the growing child is evaporated milk.

It is sterile, and therefore safe. It is more digestible than market milk.

Its uniformity, convenience and cost are qualities that recommend it.

The following dishes are well suited to the needs of the growing child; they are easily digested and very nourishing:

Caramel Custard.

1 cup evaporated milk diluted with 1 cup water	¼ cup sugar (caramelized)
3 eggs	2 tbsp. sugar
	½ tsp. salt
	½ tsp. vanilla

Scald the diluted milk. Caramelize the sugar and add to milk to dissolve. Beat eggs slightly, add sugar, salt, and flavoring and combine with scalded milk. Pour into custard cups and set in a pan of hot water and cook in a moderate oven. When done, a knife blade run in the center will come out clean.

Fish Chowder.

1 pint raw fish cut in 1-inch dice	3 cups boiling water
6 small potatoes, sliced	1 cup evaporated milk diluted with
2 onions chopped fine	1 cup water
¼ pound fat salt pork, sliced	6 crackers

Fry out the salt pork. When brown, remove pieces of pork and put fish, potatoes, and onions in kettle. Cover with boiling water. Simmer until potatoes are tender. Add the milk and cook 5 minutes longer. Season with salt and pepper. Just before serving add the crackers.

KEEPING WELL

THE EFFECT OF HIGH TEMPERATURE

DR. FREDERICK R. GREEN
Editor of "HEALTH"

FAT men endure high temperature and humidity better than thin men. This has been proved by the American Society of Heating and Ventilating Engineers, in co-operation with the United States bureau of mines and Carnegie Institute of Technology, at Pittsburgh. In experiments to determine the relative effect of various temperatures and humidities on the human body, the scientists also found that sweat is the chief factor, causing sore eyes, when a person becomes heated.

Another common belief was blasted during the experiments when it was found that the drinking of ice water failed to develop cramps in men after they had been subjected to an hour's exposure to high temperature.

The object of the research work was to establish, by scientific study, the exact degree of temperature, and of humidity, or "comfort lines," a person should be subjected to in a room. The first experiments were to study the physiological effects of various temperatures and humidities on human subjects at rest in still air, and for these, a staff of physicians and employees of the society have subjected themselves to great hardships.

One of the important results of the experiments was the discovery of the great variations of external temperature which the human being can endure, and at the same time retain his physiological efficiency. Another fact discovered was that increasing pulse rate was more the cause of discomfort than is body temperature, when in a heated room.

In a report of the experiments are these assertions: While irrelevant to the present study, an attempt was made to determine the cause of the inflammation of the eyes, and also to find out whether or not the drinking of ice water produces cramps, as so frequently complained of by workers in the industries. On a day when the eyes were normal a small quantity of sweat which had been collected during an experiment was dropped in the eye. The conjunctiva almost immediately became inflamed and the eye felt sore. The sweat collected from the face seemed less irritable to the eye than that collected either from the chest or arms. Sweatbands were then applied to the forehead during the experiments, thus preventing the sweat from falling into the eyes and also preventing the inflammation. This proves that the sweat is the chief factor in producing the conjunctivitis which accompanies exposure to heat.

SIMPLE FROCKS FOR SCHOOL; FLARE IN COATS PARIS EDICT

HERE'S guessing, Miss Schoolgirl, as to a very important subject which will be receiving your due attention this semester, together with your perusal of Latin, Greek, higher mathematics and kindred kind. Clothes! Aye! there's a study which never loses in interest to the feminine mind. Indications are that the subject is going to prove more fascinating than ever this season.

Of course if you are to prove an apt student in the art of good dressing, it is necessary to first of all aim to wear clothes appropriate to the time and enough to supply a dash of color. Be it said that these velveteen frocks prove very serviceable.

Bolero effects in misses' fall frocks are being featured, and these insure a youthful aspect. Necklines in daytime dresses are youthful, one might almost say boyish, especially the little turn-down shirt collars with narrow ties or ribbon bows. Sleeves, barreled from elbow to wrist, peasant sleeves puffed and cuffed characterize some of the newer gowns.

Let there be a decided flare, so comes the edict from Paris, and the

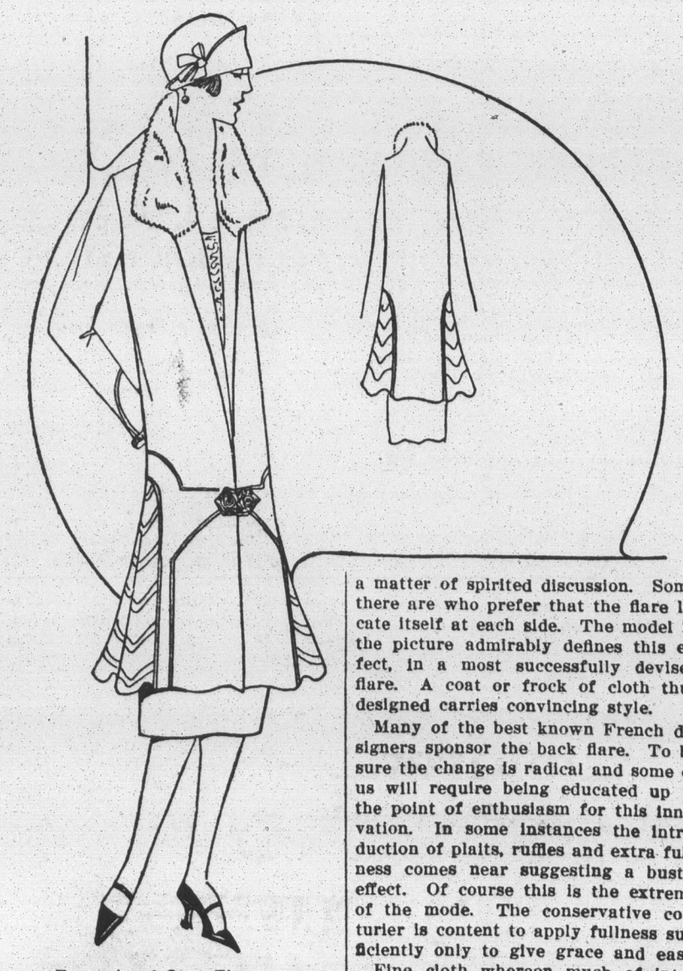
the occasion—which for the schoolgirl may be expressed in one word—simplicity. There is no costume quite so apropos for schoolgirl needs as the one-piece frock, or two-piece if you will, fashioned of fine cloth, navy blue the preferable color. By the way, how good it is to know that navy blue is "the style" this season. In fact all shades of blue are coming in for a successful run, be they classed as royal, copen, navy or pencil blue.

The frocks here pictured are well chosen models for "first day of school" wear as well as for the time to follow. Smart style places particular stress on the long sleeve. This matter of wrist-length sleeves foretells an incoming era of dainty lace and lingerie, with collar or frilly accessories to match.



Example of Coat Flare.

Graceful streaming ties, too, are given much consideration when it comes to designing schoolgirl modes.

Wool rep is a favored medium for the practical frock with bright colored flannels competing in no small degree. Balbriggan, and jersey dresses are at the height of their popularity. The smart new note is sounded in the simply tailored velveteen frock. These may or may not display a quantity of tiny buttons not so much in a trimming way but as if fastening the frock at the front. Sometimes there are plaid silk facings or pocket flaps, just thought is vizualized in the newer coats and frocks which abound in fullness below the knee, attained through clever insets, shirred portions or circular portions. There is also in the smartest Paris costumes a suggestion of the semi-fitted effect. With all this infusion of refreshingly novel ideas into its styling, it is not to be wondered at that the tailored coat for fall and winter has become a subject of zestful interest in the realm of fashion.

If there is one thing more than another that the new modes teach us it is that even our tailored topcoats and dresses have departed from the straight and narrow silhouette. As to fullness about the hemline fashionists do not hesitate, but as to whether the flare shall be back or front or all around, is a matter of spirited discussion. Some there are who prefer that the flare locate itself at each side. The model in the picture admirably defines this effect, in a most successfully devised flare. A coat or frock of cloth thus designed carries convincing style.

Many of the best known French designers sponsor the back flare. To be sure the change is radical and some of us will require being educated up to the point of enthusiasm for this innovation. In some instances the introduction of plaits, ruffles and extra fullness comes near suggesting a bustle effect. Of course this is the extreme of the mode. The conservative couturier is content to apply fullness sufficiently only to give grace and ease.

Fine cloth whereon much of intricate detail is applied in the way of braiding, embroidery, fur and the like, furnishes the basic idea for daytime frocks and coats, which promise to be dressier than for many seasons past. It is noted that gray is being featured throughout fall modes, while blue in tones from navy to pencil blue are conspicuous. Sumac red and soft dull greens indicate new color tendencies.

As to fabric, woolen rep is a favored medium. There are many trotteur dresses and coats of navy rep trimmed with details of red, rust, or violet.

TWO-HORNED RHINO

"There are people who think it's fun, said the Two-Horned Rhinoceros from Africa to the Indian Rhinoceros, "to kill wild animals.

"They don't need us for food, they don't kill us because we are hurting them or their homes or their children.

"They kill for the sake of killing—or they call it 'just for sport.'

"That is quite dreadful to my way of thinking."

"It's horrible," said the Indian Rhinoceros, "and my family have suffered in the same way yours have over in Africa."

"I am glad I am in the zoo, and I like the keeper," said the Two-Horned Rhinoceros.

"Then, too, he likes me, which makes it doubly pleasant. It would be singly pleasant if one of us liked the other, but to have each of us like each other is doubly pleasant, as I said.

"He says I am so nice and gentle and tame."

"I know he likes you," said the Indian Rhinoceros. "I also have some good news for you."

"What is it?" asked the Two-Horned Rhinoceros.

"They say," began the Indian Rhinoceros, "that the boys of today aren't going to care for hunting and killing for the sake of hunting and killing.

"They're going to feel ashamed of themselves if they hunt big game for no other reason than to see them drop down and know their lives are over, and that it is because of what they have done.

"They say that boys are growing to like animals more and to care for them.

"They say that they're finding out how interesting they really are.

"They say, too, that they are enjoying studying about them, rather than just killing them and seeing them that way.

"Then, too, I have heard that boys care more for a camera which takes pictures of animals than they do for a gun which kills animals.

"By taking pictures, by being patient, they are going to find it much more worth while than just hunting.

"Oh, it is good news I've been hearing lately, and I know it is true.

"You see I have heard the keeper talk, and I have heard the boys talk.

"I have heard boys say that they no longer thought it was big and splendid to kill animals, but that they thought

"I Am Glad I Am in the Zoo."

it was the most interesting thing in the world to know animals."

"Oh, Indian Rhinoceros," said the Two-Horned Rhinoceros, "what good news you have told me, and I'll smile my best two-horned rhinoceros smile on every person I see from now on!

"When I speak of my best two-horned rhinoceros smile, I do not mean that I smile a two-horned kind of a smile, for I couldn't do that.

"Besides a two-horned smile means nothing at all.

"But I am a two-horned rhinoceros—that is my name—and I, the two-horned rhinoceros, am going to smile my best smile.

"That is what I mean."

"I feel quite confident," said the Indian Rhinoceros, "that the people will feel rewarded when they see your best smile.

"I feel quite sure of that.

"I, too, will smile upon them with my best smile."

"Ah," said the Two-Horned Rhinoceros, "won't they be pleased to receive rhinoceros' smiles. They are used to smiles of people, and of each other, I should say, but they don't receive the smiles of a two-horned and an Indian rhinoceros all the time.

"In fact, such smiles will be both rare and unusual for them to receive.

"Their families smile upon them often, they smile at each other lots of times, but we aren't around to smile at them when they get up in the morning or when they go to bed at night.

"So they'll get smiles when they come to the zoo. That, I do hope, will be a treat.

"I certainly hope they will feel that way about our best smiles."

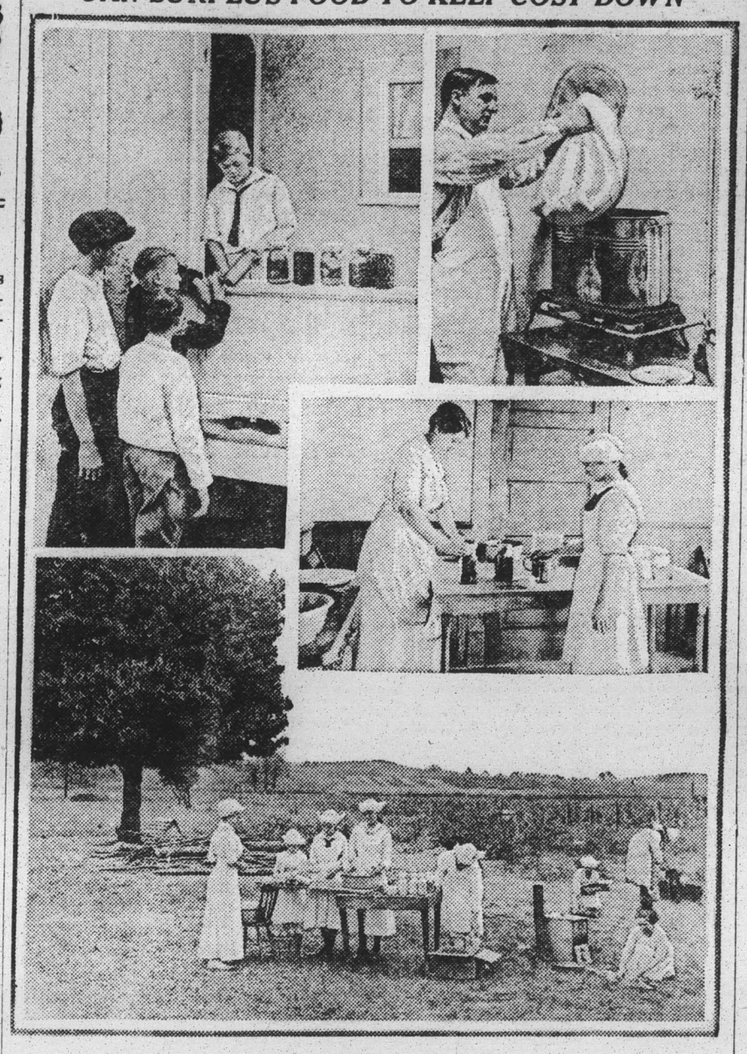
CAN SURPLUS FOOD TO KEEP COST DOWN



Everybody's Doing It—Even Father Takes a Hand in Canning Nowadays.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Don't let any fruits and vegetables go to waste in the garden this summer. When there is more than the family can eat in season, put it in cans to furnish variety in the diet next winter. An abundant supply of fruits and vegetables at all times is essential for health, and from an economic standpoint every family should produce and conserve as much as possible of its food. However, no product which is too ripe for immediate eating should be canned. Above all, do not can bruised, wilted or partly rotten material.

Open kettle canning—fruit and vegetables cooked in a kettle and put in the jars hot—is not a very satisfactory way to preserve certain kinds of vegetables, although it is used successfully with fruits and vegetables like tomatoes. The modern way, and that used by the home-demonstration workers and the boys' and girls' club leaders from the United States Department of Agriculture, is to place food products cold in jars, cover the fruit with sirup or the vegetables with salted water, and then process (heat) the jar and its contents in steam or hot water the required length of time. With this method, the average of success is high and the results are satisfactory, if directions are carefully followed, say the Department of Agriculture specialists.

Kinds of Canners.

No expensive equipment is necessary. A washboiler, lard can, or any container with a tighty fitting cover large enough to hold a number of packed jars, and a few other simple utensils generally found in the ordinary kitchen, will do the work. When such equipment is used, a false bottom must be placed in the boiler or other container to prevent the jars coming in contact with the metal. A rack made of strips of wood is probably best for the purpose. The processing or boiling of the jars in the container may be done on the kitchen stove or on a furnace built out of doors.

Several types of canners, by which the work can be done more easily than with a homemade outfit, are on the market. The hot-water-bath canner is the least expensive commercial type. There are two kinds, one that may be placed on the kitchen stove and another which has a firebox and pipe attached and is to be used out of doors. Each has a sterilizing vat, lifting trays, tongs for handling hot jars, false bottoms and tools necessary to use in sealing tin cans. Tin cans or glass jars may be used with any outfit.

There are also steam pressure outfits for home use. They develop a higher temperature than the water-bath canners mentioned. Steam pressure outfits are made to carry from 5 to 30 pounds of steam pressure and are regulated easily.

Any kind of a glass jar which makes a perfect seal readily may be used. Test both jars and rubbers to make sure they are perfect. Select jars which are appropriate for the fruit or vegetable to be packed. Consider the size of the container from the standpoint of the quantity desired when opened, the size of the fruit or pieces of fruit to be packed, and the ease of processing.

Wash the jars carefully and place them, side down, in a vessel. Cover with cold water and bring the water to the boiling point and allow it to boil for 15 minutes to process the jars.

While the jars are being boiled sort and grade the fruit or vegetables according to size and degree of maturity. Discard all over-ripe, under-ripe or unsound fruit. Vegetables should be in choice condition for the table to be suitable for canning. After the sorting and grading, wash thoroughly before proceeding to pare, core or slice. Berries should be washed lightly by placing in a colander and pouring water over them, instead of immersing them in water. Peel, or scrape when needed, and cut large products into pieces of canning size. If the hot jars are not yet ready, cover the prepared product with a clean towel or cover, but the quicker a product is prepared and packed into the jar which has been scalded 15 minutes, the better.

What Blanching Does.

The blanch—immersion for a short time in boiling water or live steam—gives a more thorough cleansing, improves the texture of the product and insures a clearer liquor in the can. It also shrinks the fruit or vegetable and makes it more flexible. A full pack is then made more easily. The time required for blanching varies with the state of maturity. After blanching the fruit or vegetable place it for an instant in cold water to make it more crisp.

Pack in the hot jars, which rest on cloths wrung out of hot water. Fruits cut in half should be arranged with the pit surface down. A thin, slender, flexible paddle made of wood is useful in placing the fruit or vegetable in the jar. When the jar has been packed as full as possible without crushing the pieces, the sirup, brine or seasoning is added. The paddle is also used to take out bubbles of air after the liquor has been added to the pack.

When the jar is full, put in place a rubber jar ring (which has been boiled in a solution of one teaspoonful of baking soda to one quart boiling water). Put on the caps. When a screw top jar is used, screw the top evenly about half way. When a glass top jar with wire clamp is used, place the lid on evenly and raise both clamps, the upper one fastened to hold the lid in place. When jars equipped with rubber caps and clamp spring adjustment for sealing hermetically are used, the cap should be fastened on the jar evenly with clamp.

THE MYSTERY OF SALLY

By CHARLES S. REID

(© by Short Story Pub. Co.)

SALLY was a hired girl, the seventeenth since the baby came, about thirteen months before. But we realized that at last we had found a treasure. Sally was inventive. The kaleidoscopic repertoire of amusement which she furnished for our tootsy-wootsy was something to command the admiration of the most callous-brained pessimist of the never-smiles.

This aggregation of inventive genius had been purchased at a weekly installment of four dollars. Cheerfully, we should have made it five on demand, within a week after her arrival.

But Sally seemed to be devoid of the graft contamination and, indeed, she spent her money like a lord, more than half of her weekly pay going for gimcracks of one kind or another for the amusement of our little one. A car ride to the park each day for the pleasure of our baby formed one of her personal extravagances. Baby soon became so much attached to her that "Mamma" was no longer interesting, except at certain periods during the day, and these periods Sally managed so cleverly that no disturbance came to the household serenity through baby's impatient demands.

One thing soon became apparent. Sally had the going habit. She wanted to be away from the house more than half of the time, but, as our little one always came back from these little excursions in excellent spirits, and, barring the harassing fears that Baby might contract some of the many contagious or infectious diseases of childhood—such as measles, chicken-pox, whooping-cough or some other horrifying thing—this habit of Sally's was not at all inconvenient to the household.

Another thing which recommended Sally was the habitual neatness of her person, and what became an interesting mystery to us was the matter of how she could spend from two to three dollars per week solely and unselfishly for the amusement of our little one, and dress herself with such taste on the remainder.

Finally, we decided that Sally must be getting credit somewhere, and that we should raise her wages, in order that she might be enabled to meet her obligations.

But about this time I saw Sally emerging from a bank one day. I had been some distance away and unobserved by her.

"Ah," I exclaimed under my breath, "she is borrowing of the bank."

The cashier of this bank was a particular friend of mine, and I determined to learn something of Sally's financial operations. This I had no trouble in doing, and soon learned to my amazement that Sally was not a borrower, but a depositor, to the extent of forty or fifty dollars a week.

My wife and I held a consultation over the matter, for the mystery had deepened. Why one who could indulge the daily extravagances of Sally, and yet deposit forty dollars per week, should hire herself out at a wage of four dollars per week was amazingly mysterious—and yet, Sally was not a thief. Not the smallest item of anything of value had been missed from the house, and no coins or bills ever were kept about the place.

So the mystery of Sally deepened. But, notwithstanding this, Sally was by incalculable odds the best nurse we ever had possessed, or ever could hope to have, and we determined that nothing should dispossess us of her services—no, not if it became necessary to raise her wages to ten dollars per week, which extravagance I could of course ill afford.

So Sally remained, keeping up her usual program, only inventing new means of amusement each day. How long we should have kept her I do not know. But accident plays a large part in the movement of human affairs, and it was an accident which led to the separation of our Sally from us.

An employee from our mills had been seriously crushed in a dray collision over on the East side, and I had gone over to investigate the responsibility for the accident. This matter being soon concluded, I was returning to the office, when I met Jenkins, a friend of mine. Jenkins likes a faker, or a side-show performance better than anything; and the East side was noted for its attraction for fakers and showmen of one kind or another.

"Hello, old man!" called Jenkins from across the street, "wait a moment."

I waited, and Jenkins came over.

"Do you know," he began, "I have found one of the smoothest artists in the show line down here that I've seen in a long while."

"What's his class?" I asked.

"Wild animal tamer, and he has been playing to crowded houses here for the past six weeks. You want to see this, especially the afternoon performance, at which time he gives an extraordinary feature."

He was leading, and we soon came to the entrance way of a large tent which occupied a portion of the area usually taken up by the showmen. Outside were a number of big posters announcing, both by word and illustration, the wonderful feats performed by the man inside, among them being one which was especially horrifying—this being announced in big letters as the special afternoon feature. Jenkins had secured tickets and was hurrying me inside.

Our seats proved to be in a good position, and we had not long to wait for the beginning of the show. The performer soon appeared in the caged arena, and the various features of the program soon were passing before us. Tigers, leopards and lions, one ofter another, had been introduced, and at last King Leo, a tremendous lion, stood beside his master in the arena.

"Now we get the star performance," whispered Jenkins.

The showman advanced to the front of the cage, where he opened a small wicket window.

"Now," he began, "if some mother in the audience will bring me her baby for a few moments, I will show you that Leo will hold the little one in his great mouth as tenderly as its mother can hold it in her arms. Trust me, some mother—your little one shall receive no harm whatever."

"We have only to wait a moment," declared Jenkins. "There is a young woman in the audience who furnishes the baby each afternoon; and Torelli, the showman, pays her ten dollars on the side after each performance."

"Horrors!" I exclaimed.

And just at this moment the young woman arose from somewhere near the front and advanced, with the baby in her arms. I got one glimpse of them—and the next instant I was on my feet, though almost transfixed in my indignation. The woman was our Sally—and the baby was our boy.

I summoned strength enough to draw my revolver, and the man who was not afraid of the whole African jungle cowered before my aim. In the meantime I somehow reached the side of Sally and seized the boy in my arms, allowing Sally to make a precipitate exit.

No doubt she is now working her scheme in some other city where Torelli is showing. And we—well, we are not requiring the services of a nurse any more. Also, we are seriously thinking of calling our boy Daniel, the little one having been delivered from the lion's mouth, you know.

Small Point About Game Jane Didn't Understand

Jane always insisted that she wanted to share all my pleasures. I was not quite so sure about it, but diplomacy has its uses, so I said nothing.

At length it became impossible to postpone again taking her to the ball game. I drew a long breath, muttered a prayer for guidance, and gave in.

"That man out there on the mound is called the pitcher. He pitches," I began.

"That man with the bat—with the club—is the batter. He hits the ball. . . ."

"Why?" asked Jane.

"It doesn't matter," I continued. "He didn't hit it. If he had succeeded, however, he would have run toward that sack, which is called first base, and if he gets there before the ball he is safe."

"But I thought you said this game was not dangerous," Jane objected.

"Only to otherwise happy marriages," I responded.

"Oh!" said Jane.

"If a man gets to first base," I resumed, "the succeeding batters try to advance him by hitting the ball. If he goes all the way around, past second and third bases, and reaches home plate without being put out, a run is scored for his team.

"When three men are put out, the other side comes to the bat, and when each side has had nine turns at bat the game is over. The team that makes the most runs wins.

"Is that clear?" I asked.

"Perfectly," Jane assured me. "But one thing I don't understand."

"What is it?" I inquired.

"Why is it," Jane queried, "why is it that the men wear mittens only on one hand? It seems so silly."

A senile judge decided that my subsequent remarks constituted mental cruelty.—"J. K. M.," in Kansas City Star.

Vain Gratitude

Walter Damrosch said at a dinner in Chicago:

"Musical conductors always find it hard to get enough orchestra rehearsals. Saint-Saens was once rehearsing some of his own pieces for a concert to Lille. There were seven rehearsals, and Saint-Saens noticed that the kettle-drummer was the only member of the orchestra who attended them all. Of the other members one on this occasion was giving private lessons, another on that occasion was playing at a theater, and so forth and so on.

"Saint-Saens at the seventh and final rehearsal said gratefully to the faithful kettle-drummer:

"'I thank you, friend, for your steady attendance, and good work at all these rehearsals of mine.'

"'Oh, that's all right,' the kettle-drummer answered carelessly. 'At your concert, though, another chap will take my place. I have to drum at a ball.'"

Was Taking No Chances

An art dealer had a chance to place a few dining-room pieces. So he asked an impecunious artist to paint him a still life of a salad in oil. The artist, being unusually hard up at the time, wanted to know if the dealer would furnish the salad. The dealer said he would.

"And the oils?"

"Yes, but no vinegar. I want you to paint this salad. I don't want you to eat it."

Mystery Hangs Over Prophesies of Enoch

The first trace of the existence of the Book of Enoch is found in the Epistle of St. Jude, verse 14, in which reference is made to the prophesies of Enoch from which St. Jude quotes, but it is uncertain whether he derives his quotations from tradition or from writing, although the wide spread of the book in the Second century seems almost decisive in favor of the latter supposition. Considerable fragments are preserved in the "Chronographia" of Georgius Syncellus (about 792 A. D.), and these, with the scanty notices of earlier writers, constitute the sole remains of the book known in Europe till the close of the Eighteenth century.

A report was current that the entire book was preserved in Abyssinia, and at length in 1773 Bruce brought with him on his return from Egypt three manuscripts containing the complete Ethiopic translation. The Ethiopic translation was made from the Greek, and probably toward the middle or close of the Fourth century. But it is uncertain whether the Greek text was the original, or itself a translation from the Hebrew. In its present shape the book consists of a series of revelations supposed to have been given to Enoch and Noah which extend to the most varied aspects of nature and life, and are designed to offer a comprehensive indication of the action of Providence.

Notwithstanding the quotation in St. Jude and the wide circulation of the book itself, the apocalypse of Enoch was uniformly and distinctly separated from the canonical Scriptures.

It's Worth the Money

"Golfers certainly are persistent, even when persistence is costly," declares a seller of supplies at the Sylvan Glen course. "Not long ago a well-knickered chap with plenty of clubs and a terrible slice bought three balls to start his game. At the first tee he drove all three into the creek below, a creek that holds enough water to make recovery impossible. He came back and sought three more and shot two of this new supply into the creek with the others before he finally drove over. After that he played all the way around with the one ball. His experience is not unusual, either. Others suffer the same way. But they keep on buying balls until they make a successful drive. And that one drive always seems to compensate them for their losses."—Detroit News.

Pajamas After This

A coed at Indiana university was sending her washing to a woman in town instead of sending it home, as so many of the students do. The clothes always came back with a neat list of the clothes included with the price after each. The coed had a favorite blouse that she wore to classes, which was often in the wash. It usually headed the list: "Blouse—20 cents."

One day the regular washwoman was sick and a neighbor did the work. This time the list read, "one-half a pajama—6 cents." It was the same garment. The coed hopes the same mistake will be made in the future, because seemingly as much care was taken with the half a pajama as with a street blouse.—Indianapolis News.

Taking Advantage

Now that Frank Atkinson has given up breaking records and flivvers on Cahuenga pass, he devotes his time to his police dog Nan, and recently brought her home from the farm where they have been training her. The dog immediately took a great fancy to Doris. She tried to lick her face, kept brushing up against her and followed her all over the house.

Doris was half afraid of her and once, when Nan rushed up to her from behind, Doris turned and said with great indignation:

"You is 'tentioning me too much, even if I is your relation."—Los Angeles Times.

Extensive Irrigation Plan

A striking scheme of irrigation which will tap the Huancabama river on the eastern Andean slopes and divert the water through a nine-mile tunnel to the western side of the range, where it will be connected with four or five other rivers and form a permanent water supply for 120,000 arid acres on the coastal plain, is an innovation in irrigation plans now under way in northern Peru. Forty million cubic feet of river water will reach the rice fields and sugar plantations of Chiclayo and Lambayeque by means of a dam about forty-five miles from the seaport town of Pimentel.

China's Gifts to the World

The Chinese, before 1357 B. C., invented water cocks, improved weapons, wheeled vehicles, musical instruments and junks. The Emperor Yau built roads and canals. The compass was invented in 1115 B. C. and engraving in 1900 B. C., and gunpowder, firepots, firecrackers, which they used extensively at celebrations, etc., and also in battle to frighten horses, etc., and repeating crossbows and printing were also invented by the Chinese.

No Need to Worry

Talk about overcrowding the world is nonsense. On a conservative estimate there are enough unsold building lots laid out in the United States at this writing to accommodate 500,000 people with plenty of purchasable acreage for allotment just beyond.—Miami Tribune.

Community Building

City Man Has to Cope With Much Discomfort

The high cost of living in a big city, the noise, the smoke and other discomforts are largely responsible for the phenomenal growth during the last ten years of the suburban zones around all large American cities. High land values in the city and high taxes have contributed toward making high rents. These factors are less important in the suburbs. In the cities the police frequently are unable to cope with crime. A city resident cannot always feel safe on the streets after dark or feel certain of the safety of members of his family. In the suburbs he has little cause for worry. If the city man is dependent on street cars or elevated cars for transportation between his home and office he must either live close to his place of business or in a locality that may be undesirable or spend an unnecessarily long time on the cars. A suburban home 25 miles from the city may be closer in actual time spent in travel than a city apartment half of that distance from the downtown area. Most cities have grown faster than their intra-mural transportation facilities; but the man who drives to and from work in an automobile is not much better off unless he can afford a chauffeur or can get down to work and back home before the rush hour.

Vacant Lot Usually More Than Eyesore

Every city has vacant lots. They are a part of the landscape, and lie singly or in pairs or in triplets and other numbers between houses. Vacant lots were meant to have houses built on them. Oftentimes, instead, they lie idle to grow up in weeds. While they are growing up in weeds they also are accumulating taxes and interest, which the owner has to pay. He doesn't wish to sell the lot at a loss and sometimes he doesn't wish to hold it any longer. In addition to growing weeds, a lot may be a convenient dumping ground for the neighbors. The absence of a lot would compel them to put their grass cuttings, tin cans and shrubbery trimmings out for the refuse men to take away. Sometimes, rather than carry ashes to the street front or the alley to be hauled away by the ashes collector, people will dump them on a vacant lot. Then when building operations begin, the ashes, tin cans, broken bricks, old furnace pipe, dead shrubbery, old shoes, old rubbers, etc., must be hauled away by the builder or turned under to furnish further trouble for the house buyer when he starts to dig a garden or flower bed.

Buried Town Hoodoo

At Daytona, Fla., a group of town boosters had a big ceremony on the beach and resolved thenceforth to devote their every effort to promote the welfare of their town and country. They decided never to neglect a civic responsibility, whether that of voting, making true tax returns, supporting the best man for the public job or giving whole-hearted encouragement to the officials who are elected. In token of this they brought out an effigy of the familiar American alibi of "Let George Do It," and after mauling the figure all over the beach, buried it in a grave most wide and deep. It remains to be seen how long this conversion to a better manner of civic life will last. If it endures, other communities could try the plan, to their advantage.—Akron Beacon Journal.

Ford Sees Coming Change

"The modern city has done its work and a change is coming," Henry Ford said, in a recent interview. "The city has taught us much, but the overhead expense of living in such places is becoming unbearable. The cost of maintaining interest on debts, of keeping up water supply, sewage and sanitary systems, the cost of traffic control and of policing great masses of people is so great as to offset the benefits of the city. Industry of the future will be organized on a big scale, but competition will force it to move to parts of the country where labor is steady and overhead costs are low. Instead of making the man come to the city, we will take the work to him in the country."

Home Owning

In a few brief generations men have broken the chains that made the serf the slave of the land, and have made the land the servant of the freeman. He who neglects his opportunity, dearly bought by his predecessors, to shelter his loved ones under his own roof, is sadly like the man who fails to open his umbrella in the rain.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Cities in Competition

Twenty Wisconsin cities have entered a "better cities contest," and they will be judged in relation to public education, health, location, playgrounds, libraries, parks. At the request of Dr. John C. Callahan, state superintendent of public instruction for Wisconsin, Doctor John J. Tigert, commissioner of education of the Interior department, has designated Walter S. Deffenbaugh, chief division of city schools of the bureau of education, to be one of the judges.

Western Boy's Rose Takes Prize Honor

If these were the good old times, when laurel wreaths rested on deserving brows, fourteen-year-old Jimmy Dunning, rose grower extraordinary, would have one cocked over his cowlick, and a youthful blackamoor page besides, to carry the tail of his toga, says the Portland Telegram, which continues:

And nobody would blame him for strutting through the forum or festival center or wherever the admiring crowds might be assembled.

For Jimmy has put all the old heads among the local rose growers to rout and won the grand sweepstakes prize for the best blossom at the rose show against contestants who have spent double his lifetime in making pruning a fine art and fertilization a matter of prayer.

The judges decided that a Frau Carl Druschki rose, grown on one of Jimmy's own bushes in the family garden at 884 East Yamhill street, was the finest among all the aristocrats of blossoms entered at the show.

Location of Ores Revealed by Smoke

Over the entrance to the principal mine of a lead company in Arizona hangs a portrait of "Antonio, the Cave Finder," an employee who roams about the underground passage puffing cigarettes, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. He keeps close watch of the smoke as it drifts away, and if he sees it disappearing through tiny breaks in the rock formation, the workings are extended in that direction, which often leads to inner caves, rich in ore. Minerals in this region seem to have been deposited in cavities which lie in an approximately horizontal plane. The mine is said to have been enlarged by more than half a mile in this manner. Tunnels are driven under the caves and the ore is dropped directly into the cars that carry it out of the mine.

Life's Span Extending

In spite of the fact that the continued betterment of health and living conditions in this century has given Americans the expectancy of longer and longer lives, the average American had his "expectancy of life" reduced from 58.01 years in 1921 to 57.32 years in 1923, or a loss of about eight months. According to statisticians of a leading life insurance company, who compiled the figures, greater prevalence of influenza and pneumonia in 1922 caused the reduction, but from advance indications for 1924 and 1925 the expected span from birth to death will be a larger number of years than it was in 1921, a banner year.

Preserving Wild Game

Those who want to see our big game protected commend the state authorities of South Dakota for their conservation of several valuable species of fast-perishing fauna in the state park set apart in the Black hills. Here there are 110 buffalo, 1,000 elk, 2,000 deer, 300 beaver, 400 coons and thousands of game birds. The nominal value of the creatures is $105,000, but as teachers of natural history they are worth incalculably more.

Looked That Way

"Are you going very far on your camping trip?" Susan asked her small friend Betty. The little girl considered deeply before she replied, "Yes, I think so, if I can tell anything by the signs." "Signs?" inquired Susan. "What signs?" Betty considered again. "Why," she answered, at length, "the long arguments that mother and daddy have."

Crow's Little Hoard

While cutting a large tree at Stow, Maine, Herbert Andrews was surprised to see a piece of money fall at his feet. Upon picking it up, it proved to be a bright dime, which was partly covered with flecks of tree mold. A careful search of the tree, after it was felled, disclosed the place from which the coin had fallen. As the tree was well back in the woods from any highway, it is believed that a crow, attracted by the gleam of the dime, picked it up and carried it to a safe hiding place.

EASING THE BURDEN OF STATE TAXATION

Banker Points Out Benefits of Community Property System in Some States.

Favorable aspects of tax systems are now among the most highly prized assets of our states, it is pointed out in the American Bankers Association Journal in connection with an article on how California, which has never had a state income tax, cuts state and Federal death taxes nearly in half by the "community property" system. L. H. Roseberry, Vice President Security Trust and Savings Bank, Los Angeles, author of the article, says that a recent amendment to the tax law enables future residents of the state to take advantage of it. Reference is made to a former article by Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Dewey, voicing the need for death tax reform and citing a hypothetical case involving California inheritance taxes which might have been levied in 1920. Since that time the laws have been changed, Mr. Roseberry declares, so that the figures then given do not correctly represent the present situation. He says:

"Ever since its admission California has had the 'community property' system. Eight other states have a similar system. 'Community property' is property accumulated by married persons during their marriage, except that which is acquired by gift, bequest or inheritance. Approximately 65 per cent of all property in the state is 'community property.' Such property in California enjoys the most favorable position in regard to death taxes, both state and Federal, of any state in the Union (excepting possibly the eight other states having a similar property system) including states boasting of no inheritance tax whatever. The California 'community property' system is recognized for the purpose of levying Federal estate taxes, and only one-half of it is now so taxed, while in Florida the whole estate of a decedent is subject to the Federal levy.

How the Law Works

"California's law expressly provides that upon the death of either husband or wife, testate, only one-half of their net 'community property' shall be subject to inheritance taxes. The same exemption applies upon the death of the husband, intestate, while the whole net 'community property' is totally exempt from all state inheritance taxation upon the death of the wife intestate. The Federal estate tax law now follows precisely the California law in this respect.

"As the result of an amendment made to the California inheritance tax law by the 1925 Legislature, this immunity from state inheritance taxes likewise now extends to 'community property' of non-resident married persons, who hereafter take up their legal residence in the state. This puts 'community property' in a more favorable position regarding death taxes than exists in any other state in the Union, with the possible exception of the other community property states. This extension of the exemption will add 15 per cent to property in the state coming under this definiton, which means that approximately 80 per cent of all property probated in California will enjoy the lightest death taxes in America.

"To illustrate, the following example of a man survived by a wife and two minor children is computed, the estate consisting of 'community property' all left by will to the wife and children. One-half of such property would go under the law to the wife without any death taxes, and the other half only would be subject to both state inheritance and Federal estate taxes.

"As a subject of comparison, take a state which has no inheritance tax, such as Florida. If the comparison were made with the states which impose inheritance taxes but do not have the 'community property' system, the advantage in favor of California would even be more striking.

Estate of $100,000	Total Tax
California	None
Non-inheritance-tax state	$500
Advantage in favor of California	500
Estate of $200,000
California	905
No-inheritance-tax state	3,000
Advantage in favor of California	2,095
Estate of $400,000
California	5,779
Non-inheritance-tax state	13,000
Advantage in favor of California	7,220
Estate of $10,000,000
California	1,249,155
Non-inheritance-tax state	2,543,500
Advantage in favor of California	1,294,345

"If the two children were adults, the California tax would be increased only $280 in each case.

Another New Amendment

"Another feature of the recent amendment to the California inheritance tax law is a section fixing the inheritance taxes on stock in California corporations owned by non-residents at a flat sum of 2 per cent on their actual value. When considered in conjunction with the ruling that no inheritance taxes can be levied upon any stock in foreign corporations, or upon bank accounts, bonds, notes, debentures, or similar securities belonging to a non-resident but located in the state at the time of such non-resident's decease, it will be observed that at present the inheritance tax situation in California is most favorable, both to non-residents who have property in this state and to married people who live here or who may subsequently move here from elsewhere."

STRAIGHT TALKS WITH AUNT EMMY

ON A NARROW ESCAPE

"Oh, Aunty, I just have to talk to you," said Maud, bursting in on Aunt Emmy. "Those bonds Tom's father gave us for a wedding present have matured and Tom has the money. A man is trying to get Tom to invest in a radio company. I want your opinion on it."

"Don't hurry; tell me everything you can remember," said Aunt Emmy.

"Well, Tom didn't seem enthusiastic. Then Mr. Brown, the salesman, said that if he bought stock in his company, and wanted his money at any time, the company would buy back his stock."

"Are you sure he said that?" interrupted Aunt Emmy. "That is a claim that is not made by people connected with dependable investment houses. Unless you have an agreement with the company clearly stating that it will repurchase its stock, signed by one of its officers, you would have great difficulty in getting the company to buy back your stock. A company cannot be compelled to repurchase its own stock. Do you know who Mr. Brown is?"

"No," replied Maud. "Neither does Tom, but he seems awfully nice and Tom liked him right from the start. He is good looking, well dressed, and has beautiful manners."

Aunt Emmy sniffed. "Did he offer to sell you preferred stock on which dividends are guaranteed?"

"Why, how did you know, Aunty?" exclaimed Maud. "That is exactly what he did."

"I thought so," said Aunt Emmy. "Reliable stock salesmen don't promise that a company will repurchase its stock, nor do they promise guaranteed dividends. Unless a company operates profitably, it cannot pay honest dividends of any sort, guaranteed or otherwise. You can see how foolish it is to believe that you can get dividends just because some one says they are guaranteed. The only guarantee in the world for dividends is the successful operation of a company. Guaranteed dividends is a glib phrase used by unscrupulous persons to get money from unthinking ones. A while back the country was flooded with fake oil stock. Now dishonest promoters are trying radio stock."

"What shall I do?" cried Maud. "Tom is with Mr. Brown now at the store to buy the stock with the bond money."

"You just go to the phone and call Tom," said Aunt Emmy. "Ask him and Mr. Brown to meet you at the bank at ten o'clock. Tell him not to buy the stock until you talk with him again. Half the money is yours. Then call the bank and make an appointment with the vice president to discuss an investment."

About noon Aunt Emmy's telephone rang. It was Maud. "The queerest thing happened, Aunty," she said. "Mr. Brown agreed to meet us at the bank at ten o'clock. Tom and I waited until eleven and he never showed up. Then Tom told the vice president about it and he said we had a lucky escape. Only last week the bank looked up the company Mr. Brown represented and it is absolutely no good!"—A. B. Aymes.

THE FEDERAL RESERVE A NATIONAL PROBLEM

By WILLIAM E. KNOX
President, American Bankers Association

The Federal Reserve situation is the paramount problem before American banking today. The time is approaching when it will be necessary for the nation to consider the question of rechartering the Federal Reserve Banks.

William E. Knox

The Federal Reserve System must be preserved. It is one of the most scientific banking systems in the world. During the last ten years, through all the stress of war, inflation, depression and revival, it served this country as no country was ever served by a banking system. We know that without it our nation would have had a financial disaster far more devastating than any that ever assailed it.

While we have this great loyalty and obligation to the System, we must recognize that among its friends there has risen serious controversy over many matters of detail. There are many demands for change in the methods of its management and in details of its operation. Where these demands represent broadly the greatest good of the greatest number we should support them. Where they represent merely narrow, diverse interests of one part of the country or one type of business or finance, they should be subordinated to the common good. We should meet on the great broad ground of the common welfare—first to preserve the system in general as it is now constructed, and secondly to bring about, carefully and soundly, such changes as are required to adjust it to circumstances of today.

The task of considering, sifting, weighing and co-ordinating discussion and suggestions regarding the Federal Reserve System has been confided to the Economic Policy Commission of the American Bankers Association. It is hoped that thereby the Federal Reserve System will be given the best thought and the best support of banking. There is no greater service banking can render the nation than this. It goes right to the heart of good management of the public economy of America.

The Mint's Sidelines

The United States mints make other objects besides coins. All of the medals for the army and navy are turned out by the mints. Medals of all the Presidents, the Secretaries of the Treasury, the Directors of the Mints, have been designed and executed by the mints. Recently the mints inaugurated the practice of making medals of the Under Secretaries of the Treasury. Congress has authorized the mint to make up 40,000 medals to commemorate the arrival of the first shipload of Norse immigrants on board the sloop Restaur Ationen, which is to be celebrated at the Norse-American Centennial in Minnesota next summer.

At the last session of Congress there was a flood of bills seeking to have commemorative half dollars minted. The prior session authorized the minting of the Huguenot half dollars and of 5,000,000 half dollars to signalize the start of work on the Stone Mountain carving, which will serve as a monument to the valor of the soldiers of the South. On the Federal coins appear Generals Lee and Jackson, the two leaders of the Confederate forces in the Civil War.

A Flood of Coins

With the 150th anniversary of the great battles of the American revolution approaching, bills were passed last winter to issue coins commemorating the stand of the minutemen at Lexington and Concord and the battle of the Green Mountain patriots at Bennington in Vermont. Proposals were made to pay tribute in a similar way to the battle of Bunker Hill, the victory at Yorktown and other events American history, such as the 200th anniversary of the founding of Stoughton, Mass., and the 50th anniversary of the admission of California to the Union.

Fearing that the growth of this practice would open the way to counterfeiting and make the protection of the integrity of the coins more difficult, Secretary Mellon openly opposed the creation of these special coins, but was not entirely successful in his efforts. He insisted that the practice introduced confusion into our system of coinage, brought about an unnecessary expense and satisfied a very limited demand because the public generally has never shown a special liking to the commemorative coins.

However, Congress felt that these great events were worthy of commemoration and authorized the coins—all of which are to be sold at a premium so that the promoters of these events may raise funds by this extra charge to defray part of the expense attached. The records of the Treasury show that the special coins, as a general rule, are seldom absorbed in circulation. The Monroe coin issue was a dismal failure—217,000 of the 274,000 struck off were turned back to the Treasury for melting up. — Journal American Bankers Association.
